

Slavs and Tatars Molla Nasreddin: The Magazine That Would've, Could've, Should've

Program
Anthologies & Art Theory

Edited by
Slavs and Tatars

Authors
Slavs and Tatars

Edition
English
March 2011
ISBN: 978-3-03764-212-2
Softcover, 240 x 280 mm
208 pages
Images 218 color
CHF 39 / EUR 29 / £ 21 / US 37.5

The legendary Azeri magazine

Slavs and Tatars presents "Molla Nasreddin: The Magazine That Would've, Could've, Should've." It features a selection of the most iconic covers, illustrations and caricatures from the legendary Azeri satirical periodical of the early 20th century, "Molla Nasreddin." The most important publication of its kind, "Molla Nasreddin" was read across the Muslim world from Morocco to Iran, addressing issues whose relevance has not abated, such as women's rights, the Latinization of the alphabet, Western imperial powers, creeping socialism from Russia in the north, and growing Islamism from Iran in the south. "Molla Nasreddin" not only contributed to a crucial understanding of national identity in the case study of the complexity called the Caucasus, but offered a momentous example of the powers of the press both then and today.

The publication is part of the series of artists' projects edited by Christoph Keller.